Our patrons regard it as one of the main inducements that decide them to send their sons to this college. With the presid nt of the college and the successive members of the college and the successive members of the State Board of Agriculture, it has always been a cheri-hed idea. Our legislators, however much they may object to other terms in appropriation bills, never object to that which provides for the pymant of student labor. And so, while we would not overlook or depreciate the difficulties that beset its practical management (and which have caused so many industrial colleges to discard it), we would urge to united effort to give student labor the promises of theserves in an agricultural college course."

When large quantities are raised

A correspondent of the Homestead says that long and carefully conducted experiments in feeding both large and small quantities of sour apples to cows giving milk, unexpectedly showed me two years the flow of milk. The lots of cows were alternated with apple feed and without.
